Forklift tynes are dangerous. There are strict health and safety regulations related to forklift use especially in areas shared with the public. The Department of Transport and Main Roads require the conditional registration of forklifts with a specific requirement dictating that "Potentially hazardous projections to be covered by rigid material."

Let's admit it, Forklift Tynes are not easy to see. Cars driving and reversing in operational areas run the real risk of major damage. Pedestrians tripping over tynes is a Health and Safety nightmare for all involved. An easy 30 seconds to attach will potentially save a life time of hurt.

PARKSAFE: Tyne protectors offer a park safe solution.

Keep yourself safe, keep your staff safe. Make sure your forklifts are completely FORKSAFE™
